COLDWATER — When producers of Bravo's "Spy Games" told Douglas Laux of Coldwater to approach the reality TV contest as if it were the real deal, he turned into a hard-as-nails instructor, the type he endured at the Central Intelligence Agency's training facility called The Farm.

Laux said his performance as one of the show's three judges makes Simon Cowell look like a teddy bear.

time on the show that concludes in episode 5. He tears into one at 10 p.m. Monday. "I was like, 'Do you understand how intense it is to go through the Farm?' They'll fillet you. They will open you up."

That's exactly what they had in mind for the show that finds 10 contestants vying to outwit one another in a series of cloakand-dagger missions to become the top spy and collect a $100,000 prize.

"They did ask me to step back into that persona. It's kind of like asking somebody, 'Get back into uniform,' " he explained.

Laux delivered the goods, his paper while talking about his style perhaps best encapsulated of the show's 10 contestants facing elimination after she makes the mistake of rolling her eyes at him.

"That's exactly what pisses me off," he responds to her. "I would have been bounced in one second if I rolled my eyes at an instructor. You don't get it. This is your second time here, and I'm seeing the exact same (bleeped expletive) every single time.

Laux was approached about signing on to the show not too long after he had finished work as executive producer and star of

'The only modifications made to it when it was refurbished and reinstalled was the counterweight system so that it doesn't have to be manually wound when the time comes to do that," he continued. SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Twenty-one people aboard a mammoth cruise ship off the California coast tested positive for the new coronavirus and 19 of them are crew members, Vice President Mike Pence said Friday, amid evidence the vessel was the breeding ground for a deadly cluster of more than 10 cases during its previous voyage.

He said federal officials were working with California authorities on a plan to bring the ship to a non-commercial port. There was no immediate word on where or when the vessel will dock. Everyone on board was staying in their rooms.

The machine that keeps time by today's standard is hundreds of pounds of steel and brass, ticking away with the aid of a pendulum a perfect second

"It was installed as part of this original church building, and it has been functioning here ever since then," Bucklin said. "In 2010 we actually had it disassembled, refurbished, restored and reinstalled here. So what you see here is still the original mechanisms of the clock, but refurbished and put

And that's why the bells toll at the hour and everything. Obviously it's kind of unnecessary in a lot of ways now, but we still do it as a part of that tradition and history

Pence said 46 of the more than 3,500 people aboard were tested in the first round. A military helicopter crew lowered test kits onto the 951-foot Grand Princess by rope Thursday and later retrieved them for analysis as the vessel waited off San Francisco, under orders to keep its distance from shore.

Health officials trying to establish whether the virus is circulating on the Grand Princess undertook the testing after reporting a passenger on a previous voyage of the ship, in February, had died of the disease.

Health authorities disclosed that at least 10 other people who were on the same journey also were found to be infected. And some passengers on that trip stayed aboard for the current voyage - increasing crew members' exposure to the virus.

Kids' glass butterfly art will take off

By LESLIE GARTRELL lgartrell@dailystandard.com

COLDWATER - A group of Coldwater Elementary School first-graders will see their artwork take flight in May during a butterfly-themed traveling art exhibit.

Kari Forsthoefel, an art teacher at the school, and 23 students were chosen to participate in Brazee Street Studio's 10th Annual Kid's Glass Exhibition. The Cincinnati studio selected Coldwater Elementary School as one of 39 Ohio schools chosen to exhibit out of 80 applicants.

Brazee Street Studio supplied the class with materials to create glass monarch butterflies. Once completed, the butterflies will be on display as an installation at the studio with an opening reception on May 2. The installation will run through June.

'She's giving them the freedom to do their own thing.

- Principal Mike Etzler of art teacher Kari Forsthoefel

In July the students' butterflies will migrate from the studio show to the Cincinnati Contemporary Art Center, where they will be on display from July-October.

'Kari is outstanding," elementary school principal Mike Etzler said. "It's a great experience for the students. It's amazing watching Kari work because art class can be a little chaotic, and she's giving them the freedom to do their own thing."

Students first designed their butterflies with colored pencils to use later as a stencil. The kids learned about the different types of glass they would be using, such as wafer glass to break into small pieces for color and frit glass to fill in areas of color and build layers.

The students were excited and worked hard on their glass masterpieces, often consulting with each other to ask if their butterfly looked good or if they liked the color. Forsthoefel emphasized that students were free to be as creative as they liked and reassured them it was all right it their butterfly didn't come out perfectly.

The art teacher said she was excited to have a class participate in the project and hoped to have had it wrapped up by the end of

Congressional panel: Boeing's 'culture of concealment' led to deadly crashes

The Associated press

A congressional committee investigating Boeing said Friday that a "culture of concealment" at the company and poor oversight by federal regulators contributed to two deadly crashes involving the grounded 737 Max.

The committee's Democrats said multiple factors led to the crashes, but it homed in on a new flight-control system that pushed the nose of each plane down based on faulty sensor readings. Boeing Co. failed to classify the system as critical to safety, part of a strategy designed to avoid closer scrutiny by regulators as the company developed the plane, the House Transportation Committee said.

The report said Boeing had undue influence over the Federal Aviation Administration, and FAA managers rejected safety concerns raised by their own technical experts.

Staffers for the committee's Democratic majority made the comments in a preliminary summary of the panel's nearly yearlong investigation of Boeing's development of the Max and the FAA's decision to approve the plane.

The committee has held five hearings and disclosed troves of internal Boeing documents that highlighted company employees' safety concerns about the Max. The panel's summary did not break new ground, but it illustrated the breadth and depth of one of several investigations currently underway into Boeing.

Boeing spokesman Bryan Watt said the Chicago-based company has "cooperated extensively for the past year with the committee's investigation" and will review the preliminary report.

The FAA said its certification procedures "are wellestablished and have consistently produced safe aircraft and by making incorrect designs," but it welcomed the scrutiny. "We are confident that our openness to observations and recommendations is called MCAS. The company will further bolster aviation safety worldwide," said FAA from the FAA and didn't tell spokesman Lynn Lunsford.

portation Committee suggested that the report by the Democratic staff had gone too far in faulting how FAA approves new planes.

Other investigations into the Max accidents and FAA's oversight of Boeing have found problems with Boeing's assumptions about pilot reaction in emergencies and the FAA's expertise in understanding complex automation in the Max.

However, "None of these expert reviews or investigations have come to the conclusion that our safety certification system is broken or in need of wholesale dismantlement," said the two top Republicans on the committee, Sam Graves of Missouri and Garret Graves of Louisiana.

The committee Democrats' report said Boeing jeopardized safety by pressuring employees to speed up production of the plane assumptions about important technology, especially the flight-control system, which concealed key information pilots about MCAS until after Republicans on the Trans- the first crash.

Romney to support GOP effort to investigate Biden

WASHINGTON (AP) Utah Sen. Mitt Romney says he will support a subpoena to interview a witness and obtain records related to Burisma, the gas company in Ukraine linked to former Vice President Joe Biden's son. The push comes as Biden has emerged as a front-runner to challenge President Donald Trump in November's election.

Romney, the lone Republican who voted to convict Trump in last month's Senate impeachment trial, was in a position to play spoiler on the Homeland panel. The panel's chairman, Wisconsin Sen. Ron Johnson, plans a vote Wednesday to proceed with an investigation of Hunter Biden's activities in Ukraine, but will need every Republican vote to issue a subpoena.

There is no evidence of wrongdoing by the Bidens, and Hunter Biden has denied using his influence with his father to aid Burisma. But Republicans coming to Trump's whether they created a conflict of interest for Joe Biden as he worked on Ukraine policy in the Obama administration. Johnson has said that he will hold a vote to subpoena Andrii Telizhenko, a consultant to a lobbying firm that worked with Burisma, for documents and testimony.

In a letter to Michigan Sen. Gary Peters, the committee's top Democrat, Johnson said 'the American people have a right to know how their government officials conducted certain parties received special treatment, and whether any apparent or actual conflict of interest unduly influenced U.S. policy.

Romney said Thursday that he would prefer investigations to be conducted by "an independent, non-political body." Asked if the investigations appeared political, he said "the appearance isn't good."

But Friday his spokeswoman, Liz Johnson, said Romney had expressed his concerns to Ron Johnson, and that the chairman confirmed that "any interview of the witness would occur in a closed setting without a hearing or public spectacle.'

Romney "will therefore vote to let the chairman proceed to obtain the documents that have been offered," the statement read.

Johnson insists his committee's investigation is not politi- tion as partisan.

official business, whether cal. He points to letters he wrote Peters in February on his intent to pursue the probe, which was before Biden won several states on Super Tuesday and revived his candidacy.

'I see no reason why anybody would object to this," Johnson said Thursday. "And I didn't want to publicize this.'

Trump's efforts to have Ukraine investigate Hunter Biden's role as a board member for Burisma were at the heart of House Democrats impeachment probe last year. He asked Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy to investigate the Bidens on a July phone call that was revealed by a whistleblower complaint last fall. ## OSU settling some suits over abuse; cost unclear

COLUMBUS (AP) - Ohio State reached an unspecified settlement with nearly half of the roughly 350 men who say they were sexually abused decades ago by a team doctor who was jokingly known among some athletes by nick-names like "Dr. Jelly Paws."

The settlement announced Friday is the first for accusers of the late Richard Strauss, who say the doctor groped and otherwise mistreated students for two decades while school officials knew about concerns but did little to stop him.

With the settlement not yet finalized, the school and others involved are staying mum about how much would be paid.

Ohio State said in a statement that a special overseer independent of the university will help allocate the funds to individual accusers based on their experiences and the harm done. The payments will come from "existing institutional discretionary funding," not tuition or taxpayer nor donor money, according to the school.

Rick Schulte, a lawyer who represented former Ohio State football players, wrestlers and other athletes, said the settlement will help the men move forward and heal.

"The bravery of our clients is humbling," Schulte said in the statement shared by the university. "We are pleased that Ohio State stepped forward and did the right thing."

Schulte and university officials wouldn't say whether specifics of the settlement had yet been shared with the affected plaintiffs. "Strauss' conduct was reprehensible, and the university's failures at the time are completely unacceptable,' Ohio State President Michael Drake said in the Friday statement. "While nothing can undo what happened here years ago, today's university has a responsibility to support our former students and alumni, and this initial settlement is another important step in the process of restorative justice.' Mike DiSabato, the exwrestler whose claims in 2018 helped prompt the university to have a law firm investigate allegations about the doctor, said the settlement isn't what he hoped but "is a deal that allows us to move forward with closure.' It remains to be seen how the deal might compare with those from other recent sexual misconduct scandals at major universities, including Michigan State's $500 million settlement for 500-plus female victims of imprisoned sports doctor Larry Nassar. Lawsuits by other Strauss accusers remain unresolved after months of mediation, and they have asked a judge to let them resume litigation. The most vocal among them have argued for a settlement that would mandate institutional change and be costly enough to convey that Ohio State and other schools can't let abuse happen again. "The other half of us that haven't settled have experienced significant sexual abuse and significant cover-up by Ohio State, so we feel we should be compensated similar to what Michigan State and Penn State people were," said Brian Garrett, a lead plaintiff in one of the still-pending cases. Lawyers for a different group of plaintiffs said in a statement that they were excluded from the negotiations that led to Friday's settlement. They called for the university to share details of the settlement so that all of the men could judge it for themselves.

CELINA — The Celina City Schools Board of Education's regular meeting has been rescheduled this month.

The meeting, originally set for March 16, will now be held at 6 p.m. March 23 in the high school auditorium.

is forging ahead with plans to begin construction work next year on the tunnel, which would replace twin pipes that have lain across the bottom of the Straits of Mackinac in northern Michigan since 1953.

State Attorney General Dana Nessel is appealing a Michigan Court of Claims ruling last October that upheld an agreement between Enbridge and former Republican Gov. Rick Snyder's administration to drill the tunnel through bedrock beneath the straits.

The case is before the state Court of Appeals, which declined to put the lower court ruling on hold while considering the matter.

Nessel, a Democrat, also has filed a separate lawsuit seeking to shut down Enbridge's existing Line 5 pipes.

But the company believes its success in court thus far creates "a path forward," spokesman Ryan Duffy said.

We feel like it's time now for Enbridge and the state to work together and keep the project moving,' he said.

Enbridge, based in Calgary, Alberta, planned Friday to provide a status report to the Mackinac Straits Corridor Authority during a meeting in St. Ignace, Michigan. The panel was established by the law that approved the tunnel agreement.

Associated Press

Great Lakes Tunnel Constructors, a partnership between Jay Dee Contractors Inc. of Livonia, Michigan, and the U.S. affiliate of Japan-based Obayashi Corp., will build the tunnel. Arup, a multinational engineering company based in London, will design it, Enbridge said in a statement.

Line 5 each day carries 23 million gallons of crude oil and natural gas liquids used for propane between Superior, Wisconsin, and Sarnia, Ontario. A roughly 4-mile segment divides into two pipes that run beneath the Straits of Mackinac.

Environmental groups want the line decommissioned, contending the underwater pipes are aging and vulnerable to a rupture that could do catastrophic damage to the lakes and their shorelines. Enbridge says they're in good condition and sustained only minor damage from a tugboat anchor strike in 2018.

For Love of Water, an advocacy group, urged the corridor authority to halt further work on the tunnel plan. The Traverse Citybased organization argued that Enbridge had failed to seek authorization for the project through the Great Lakes Submerged Lands Act as required under a common-law doctrine that holds navigable waters and soils beneath them in trust for public uses.

Bypassing those laws is "one of the most egregious attacks on citizens' rights and sovereign public trust interest in the Great Lakes in the history of the state of Michigan," said Jim Olson, the group's president.

Duffy said Enbridge will seek construction permits from the Michigan Department of Environment, Great Lakes and Energy and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The Michigan Propane Gas Association, which favors the tunnel project, said it would "guarantee Michigan residents will have the propane they need throughout the state for generations to come." Opponents said there are ways to distribute propane without continued operation of Line 5.

The Michigan Laborers District Council said the tunnel would provide "many good paying union jobs" and boost the northern Michigan economy.

Switch to beautician who does hair better

same woman, "Veronica," doing my hair for several years now. She also does my pedicures and massages. I love her shop and all of her co-workers, but I've never been very happy with how she cuts and colors my hair.

It usually takes a week or more to get my hair back to how I like it after each appointment. I've talked with her about it, but nothing has changed. When Veronica was out having surgery, "Kirsten," one of her employees, did my hair, and I liked it a lot better. I want to start having Kirsten do my hair, but Veronica is very sensitive and tends to get defensive. Any suggestions? — Hairy Situation

DEAR HAIRY SITUA-TION: I know that it's the easiest advice to give and the hardest advice to follow, but I'll say it anyway.

DEAR ANNIE I've had the Be honest. Stay positive yet truthful. Make the focus how much you liked how Kirsten did your hair, rather than the fact that you don't like how Veronica does it. Tell her how much you love her pedicures and massages and would like to keep seeing her for those.

If you feel too bad to speak up, try this useful thought experiment: If you were in her shoes and a customer expressed all that to you, would you be angry? It's your hair. Anyone less than the best won't cut it.

DEAR ANNIE I recently saw a letter to you about workplace body odor. Years ago, we had a similar situation. We had to work in very close quarters, and one person who worked the very early morning shift had a real problem. Everyone talked about how awful it was; however, nobody did anything but jabber about it. Feeling bad for that person, I went into the small room, asked the person whether they knew that we were friends and all, and got a "Yes, of course, why?" I politely said, "Your day has lasted longer than your deodorant," and presented that person a salt crystal deodorant to try. There was never a problem after that. — Compassionate Sniffer for resolving an awkward situation using empathy and generosity.

DEAR ANNIE I would like to add some advice for the 95-year-old man, "Lonely," who has been lonely since his wife died. As someone who has lost a loved one, I can understand how he feels. A support group is helpful and a possible place to meet people, but not people who are ready for a relationship. I wasn't ready for a while and had turned down dates for a long time. I had a friend who encouraged me to join a running/walking club after my loss, and it was the best thing I have ever done. I was not a fast runner, so at first I was hesitant. But after I joined, I realized that no one cared how fast I was. Everyone was friendly, supportive and encouraging. To this day my friends are people from the Manasota Track Club. In fact, that is how I met my current husband. We met on a New Year's Day morning run on the beach.

I recommend he join a club that interests him. In our club, there are people in their 80s and 90s who walk, and even some who run. Walking with people not only improves your cardiovascular health but also benefits your emotional health. You feel better after walking or running with good friends. And it gets you out of the house. — Betsie

DEAR BETSIE: That last point alone is reason enough to get involved with an organization of some kind.

Thank you for sharing how picking up a simple hobby can be invigorating, even life-changing.

Endorsing Gilmore

On March 17, 2020, voters of Mercer County can elect an outstanding and qualified individual for Juvenile/Probate Judge in Matthew Gilmore. Matthew has been in private practice for over 25 years with extensive probate and juvenile case experience.

He has served on the Celina City Schools Board of Education for over 19 years and is a former chairman of the Mercer County Republican Party for over 10 years. Over the past 22 years, Matthew has donated countless hours as a board member at Wernle Youth and Family Treatment Center, where he has helped troubled youth and their families.

Matthew Gilmore will serve us well and provide protection and guidance to the youth of Mercer County. Please join me in voting Matt Gilmore for Mercer County Juvenile/Probate Court Judge.

Nick Wehrkamp, Fort Recovery

Supporting Gilmore

I believe the voters of Mercer County have the opportunity to elect an outstanding and qualified individual for judge. It is Matthew Gilmore.

Matthew Gilmore has been an attorney for over 25 years which has gained him a wealth of legal knowledge and courtroom experience and I believe is an excellent candidate for the Mercer County Juvenile/Probate Court Judge

When I think about the qualities I want in a judge, I look for what I would want regardless of which side I am on. A good judge who is impartial and makes decisions based on the facts and has a strong understanding of the law. I want someone who will apply the law as it is written.

As a husband, father, lifelong resident of Mercer County and a Christian, I believe Matthew Gilmore has the morals and values to serve as our next Mercer County Juvenile/Probate Court Judge. He is Pro-Life, Pro-Second Amendment, has common sense and treats all people fairly, with dignity and respect. Matthew has served the Republican Party for many years, has always voted on the Republican ticket and believes in our conservative values.

Please join me in supporting Matthew Gilmore for Mercer County Juvenile/Probate Court Judge and vote for Matthew Gilmore on Tuesday, March 17, 2020.

Backing Gilmore

I found myself totally appalled by a letter to the editor in The Daily Standard on March 6.

I respect the support Janice Holdheide has for Magistrate Donna Post's qualifications for the position of Probate Court Judge. She expressed her views succinctly. I have no doubts as to Donna Post's qualifications and concern for our youth.

However, she spent as much effort in attacking the character of Matt Gilmore, Post's opponent in the race as she did supporting Ms. Post. Having worked with Matt in my role as a member of the Mercer County Republican Central Committee and having him represent me in a contract matter, I can attest that her vicious, small-minded attacks on his character are biased, unfounded and totally untrue. I would expect character assassination to occur at much higher levels of politics — and indeed we have seen it repeatedly — than at the county level.

Matt's service to the Celina City School's and his 20-plus years on the board of directors of Wernle Children's Home attest to his character far more than the one instance Ms. Holdheide cites as her example of his "lack of character." Such vitriol is out of place at this level of government and Ms. Holdheide should be ashamed of such action. It's unbecoming of anyone residing in this county. I'm also disappointed in the Standard's move to the mass media's side of smear politics.

If Ms. Post is the superior candidate, then the support and recitation of her qualities would be sufficient. Personal attacks on candidates should not be taken at this level.

I, along with many of my family and friends, totally support Matt Gilmore's candidacy, and several friends who were on the fence have decided to support Gilmore after having read the letter Ms. Holdheide submitted.

with his rhythm. He probably sees all kinds of people walking into the post office. Yet I wonder if on that day he went home after work and said to his wife, "Today I saw a woman with a coat made completely of dog hair."

I love that coat. It is just the right heft to wear on March days that might start out sunny and end up snowing, or the opposite. It is navy blue and appears to be wearing well. It has roomy pockets and a functioning zipper.

It has only one flaw: it is made of a type of fabric that attracts dog hair; not only the hair from my particular dog, but of all the dogs of the universe.

Using imperceptible impulses, it can pull dog hairs out of the air and embed them into its fibers.

I don't pretend to understand the science behind this, even though one our kids took electromagnets science fair project back in sixth grade and I helped him with it. But I think the coat is electromagnetic. It's fine for everyday chores such as walking the dog.

The worse you look, the happier your dog will be, as evidenced by the way it tries to rub up against your dress pants.

When I'm going out in public without the dog, I really do work on that coat before leaving the house. I go after it with a lint roller, and when that doesn't work, I stroke it with an old pair of rubbery kitchen gloves.

This is my tip-of-the-day: you can use an old pair of rubbery kitchen gloves to remove pet hair from furniture and clothing. Except if your clothing is made from the same fabric as my navy blue coat.

Why would a clothing manufacturer produce such a fabric? Perhaps they were unaware of its superpower.

Probably, some young fabric engineer, some hotshot, came up with this weave and brought it to his or her boss at Fabric International, Inc., exclaiming, "I've invented the perfect fabric! It's strong and durable, warm and attractive! It has no flaws!

As we all know from every movie and every story ever told, the object that has no flaws turns out to be something that gets out into the world and immediately begins to destroy humankind. In this case, by making people look bad when they go to the post office through mail delivery that is affordable, ethical and efficient.

It will carry a letter from Celina, Ohio, to Brazil (Brazil Brazil, not Brazil, Indiana) for $1.15. It maintains an office in every small town in the nation, and employs a work force that is dedicated to moving the mail with integrity and speed.

For that, you don't show up dripping dog hair.

Well, you can, because they accept letters and packages from everybody; I know this because I've been in line behind plenty of people who want to mail letters and packages that I personally would not want to touch even if I were wearing an old pair of rubbery kitchen gloves.

But I don't want to be one of those people. I want to be someone who mails a letter and the postal worker who handles it thinks, "This may be an application for a patent! Or instructions to the ambassador to Madagascar! Or a timeless poem penned in quality ink!'

Instead, on that Saturday, I wore the dog-hair coat. It was clean, for I had just washed it, but somehow in the four blocks from home to the post office it had drawn to itself all the dog hair that ever was

Fight Bernie's Castro praise with truth

By Fabiola Santiago Miami Herald (TNS)

For part two (or is it three, now?) of the saga "Bernie Sanders Exalts the Silver Lining of Repression in Cuba," cue in partisan Miami politics of exile.

Everybody, to your corner! Here comes one of our illustrious leaders, Republican Congressman Mario Diaz-Balart, a relative by marriage of the late Fidel Castro, with a resolution to condemn Sanders in Congress for his political beliefs.

In trademark fashion, Diaz-Balart announces his intention in a news conference with House Republicans, speaking with euphoric urgency, and wags his finger, very Fidel-like. He urges his followers on Twitter: Watch for my speech on the House floor!

It's all a show with the purpose of playing to the home base in Hialeah-Miami Lakes - and putting his Democratic colleagues Donna Shalala and Debbie Mucarsel-Powell up against the wall when it comes to an official censure of a colleague who happens to be the early Democratic front-runner for the presidential nomination.

But the joke is on him.

Shalala and Mucarsel-Powell, who face old and new GOP challengers in November, have both harshly criticized Sanders for his praise of Castro and Cuba's education system in last Sunday's "60 Minutes" interview.

"I'm hoping that in the future, Sen. Sanders will take time to speak to some of my constituents before he decides to sing the praises of a murderous tyrant like Fidel Castro," Shalala said.

The congresswomen have nothing to prove to Diaz-Balart.

They called his bluff, sat out the vote Thursday — and Diaz-Balart's resolution failed.

It's not that Sanders doesn't deserve the scolding. He certainly has earned #### the criticism.

He has been twice presented on a silver platter the opportunity to clarify his fondness for Fidel Castro before national audiences - and all he has done is double-down on a position that is factually and morally wrong, no matter where you fall on the political spectrum.

"Authoritarianism of any stripe is bad, but that is different than saying that governments occasionally do things that are good," Sanders said during Tuesday's debate in South Carolina.

"Occasionally, it might be a good idea to be honest about American foreign policy," he added. "And that includes the fact that America has overthrown governments all over the world, in Chile, in Guatemala, in Iran — and when dictatorships, whether it's the Chinese or the Cubans, do something good, you acknowledge that."

Apologists for dictatorships want you to see the silver lining to the repression.

Their kind of ideological totalitarianism, of course.

You don't hear the Sanderses of the world using as a positive talking point that the economy in Chile under ruthless Pinochet was great.

It's wrong on both counts, particularly so from the privileged mouth of free people who don't really know what it's like to live under totalitarian rule.

But, by the same token, don't we have higher democratic principles to uphold here for the Cuba we want to democratize, Congressman Diaz-Balart?

Isn't official censure of opponents for their political beliefs what Fidel Castro would do? What the regime still does?

There's a famous historic photograph of the comandantes who fought in the revolution that over time has lost figures as those who later opposed Castro were jailed or sought exile and were edited out, erased.

In your frenetic quest to score points for the GOP, you missed an opportunity to teach by example. We don't need to erase Bernie

We debate him.

We vote against him at the ballot box.

We tell our truths about Cuba with facts and testimony.

Castro's "literacy program" indoctrinates children with ideological messaging, militarizes textbooks and punishes opponents to this day. What Sanders praises about it, the alphabetization of people in rural areas, was already under way when Castro came to power, with a Cuba ranked fourth in Latin America with a literacy rate of 76% in 1959, according to United Nations statistics.

Castro intensified alphabetization in 1961 as he was consolidating power, eradicating the free press, muzzling artists and nationalizing wealth and lands. The literacy campaign was successful, and people passed literacy tests that indicated a 23% growth.

But, as Cuban artist Tanya Bruguera told the New Yorker: "Yes, they taught us to read and write. And then they forbade us to read what we want and write what we think."

Yet, if Sanders and his supporters still want to believe that there's something good about a 61-year dictatorship that bans books and people, it's their prerogative in this still free country.

Diaz-Balart's grandstanding resolution condemning Bernie Sanders in Congress is the classic example of how right-wing Cuban-Americans hurt their own cause by playing partisan politics at every turn.

When our politicians use Cuba for partisan political gain, they hurt the cause of democracy, here and there.

Trump surveys tornado damage

COOKEVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - President Donald Trump on Friday toured a neighborhood reduced to rubble by a tornado earlier this week and marveled at "the tremendous heart" he witnessed. He also offered a message for survivors and those who lost family members: "We love them, they're special people," he said.

Trump assumed the role of national consoler as he traveled to Tennessee. Trump surveyed devastated communities in Putnam County, where a tornado tore a 2-milelong path, killing 18 people, including five children under 13. Many more people were injured, some critically.

Statewide, the death toll stood at 24 from a pair of storms.

Trump was met upon his arrival by Tennessee Gov. Bill Lee, U.S. Sen. Marsha Blackburn and other top officials.

"It's been a painful, tragic week for our state," Lee said after surveying with Trump a street where eight people were killed.

The street was filled with debris where houses once stood. Limbs were crudely snapped from trees. A white laundry basket, chairs from a dining table, cinder blocks and a step ladder dotted the landscape.

Trump then met with survivors and volunteers at a local church filled with boxes of emergency supplies, pallets of water and tables filled with clothes.

Discovery Channel's "Finding Escobar's Millions." Laux and a fellow ex-CIA officer attempted to uncover notorious drug lord Pablo Escobar's legendary buried fortune in Columbia.

It was a physically and mentally exhausting entry into the TV industry for Laux, who had previously worked as a CIA case officer for 10 years, including two years in Afghanistan and authored the New York Times bestseller, "Left of Boom: How a Young CIA Case Officer Penetrated the Taliban and Al-Qaeda."

"That was filmed in the fields," he said. "We're running through jungles so we've more orderly and comfortgot cameramen trying to jump over tree branches, and we're meeting with dangerous people .... talking to a guy who literally was Pablo Escobar's No. 1 hitman who killed something like 600 people and did 38 years in prison." For "Spy Games," producers sought someone with real-life experience as an intelligence officer. Laux fit the bill to a T. In fact, he's technically the only spy on the show. "The only people in the United States government who should be ... called a spy are case officers from the Central Intelligence Agency who have graduated from the Farm. of keeping time for the town." Daylight saving time begins Sunday morning, necessitating the biannual task of changing all clocks by an hour. Although this adjustment was not part of the original plan for the timepiece as daylight saving time was not nationally established in the United States until 1974, the task is not overly time consuming.

'One of the gentlemen who helps maintain this, he'll come up, and it'll be just kind of like rewinding a clock that you have in your own house. You have to manually reset it and let it go. I don't know the exact details that are involved in that, but yeah, it's not too hard of a process to too difficult to do that.'

come up here and readjust the time," Bucklin said.

Adjustments are required from time to time due to external forces such as the wind on the hands of the clocks. The hands are so large that they act as sails, catching wind and rotating when they shouldn't.

Whenever we need to make adjustments to the time on the clock, we have someone who needs to go up to the clock tower and adjusts things from the top there to the actual face of the clock," Buckland said. "It isn't the easiest thing to do because you're on the inside of the tower, trying to adjust the time on the outside of it. Sometimes it requires someone on the ground spotting the clock and letting you know if you got everything right. But it isn't forth. I mean it's nothing too is something we still look to

We'll get a call once in a while that the south tower, the south-facing clock is 10 minutes off or something like that so they'll have to go and adjust it. It's something that happens on a somewhat regular basis and definitely not too much of a task."

Economic impact of virus sinks in, duration unknown

By The Associated Press

The Dow Jones Industrial average over the past five days: up 1,293, down 786, up bled 800 points at the openindex known as Wall Street's levels not seen since banks began to fall during the 2008 financial crisis. The uncertainty and potential economic damage from the coronavirus deepened this week. Sectors that cater to almost any public activity ... movie theaters, business conference organizers, hotels, airlines and amusement parks have lost billions as stockholders flee to investments they perceive as safer, such as U.S. Treasury notes, which now pay out close to nothing. Following is a brief look at how things are changing in the economy and the workplace today as the outbreak widens.

Headwinds

Germany's biggest airline, Lufthansa, says it will cut up to 50% of its flights in the next few weeks, depending on how the virus outbreak develops. It said it had seen a drastic drop in reservations, with all regions now affected. Lufthansa, which also owns Swiss airlines and several smaller regional European 83,000 flights a month. The airline earlier announced plans to cancel all flights to and from Israel for three weeks after tough restrictions on travelers from several countries.

The airline industry is among the hardest hit since the outbreak, forcing carri-An industry group said the spreading coronavirus could cost airlines as much as $113 billion in lost revenue. That figure, released Thursday, is four times the number released just two weeks ago by the The International Air Transport Association, which is imploring governments for assistance. reservations Declining have rippled outward to commercial aerospace companies. The impact on airline profitability appears to be worsening by the day, and the spread of the virus and the impact on air travel has rapidly exceeded expectations of just a few days and weeks ago," wrote Ken Herbert, an industry analyst with Canaccord Genuity.

The VIX, an lowered onto the Grand Princess by rope from a military fear barometer, is hovering at helicopter and they've been sent for analysis at a lab with the ship moored at sea just off of San Francisco, where it has been ordered to remain.

Meanwhile, cruisers with upcoming trips complained on Twitter about difficulties getting cruise operators to offer refunds for canceling trips. Cruise stocks have been hammered since the outbreak began. Norwegian Cruise Lines and Royal Caribbean have both lost more than 50% of their stock value since the start of the year, while Carnival Cruise Lines, which owns the ship stuck off the California coast, has seen its stock drop 47%. Analysts expect cruise companies to offer heavy discounts as coronavirus fears lead to canceled trips. The cruise industry provided 1.2 million jobs and paid $50.24 billion in wages and salaries in 2018, providing an estimated $150 billion in global economic impact, according to Cruise Lines International Association, a Washington-based group that carriers, operates more than represents more than 95% of global cruise capacity.

Macro view

Citing the outbreak Friday, Israeli authorities announced Moody's, a financial services company, lowered its baseline growth forecasts for G20 economies to 2.1%, from 2.4%. It lowered its U.S. growth forecast for 2020 to 1.5%, from ers to reassess their near- 1.7% and dialed back growth term financial expectations. expectations in China as well. Moody's said more down grades are possible. "Several plausible developments could lead to a far more negative scenario than our baseline forecast," said Moody's Vice President Madhavi Bokil. "A sustained pullback in consumption, coupled with extended closures of businesses, would hurt earnings, drive layoffs and weigh on sentiment. Such conditions could ultimately feed self-sustaining recessionary dynamics.' Citi believes that central banks worldwide need to counter growing market uncertainty. "The optimal policy response to the reduction in demand due to the virus outbreak is likely to be fiscal action," said Pernille Henneberg in a note to clients.

NCAA hoops game held in empty gym for COVID-19

believed to be the first U.S. sports event held without fans because of the new coronavirus, Yeshiva University beat Worcester Polytechnic Institute in a Division III men's basketball NCAA Tournament game Friday at an empty gym at Johns Hopkins University.

The scene included players on each team's bench cheering and chanting "De-fense!" to make up for the lack of fans. Only players, referees, employees and media members were present in the 1,100-seat Goldfarb Gymnasium, so the official attendance was 0.

"It was definitely different, but our guys on the bench really made up for it," Yeshiva coach Elliott Steinmetz said of the 102-78 win. "The energy on the bench was absolutely awesome, and I think it really carried the guys on the court in a big way.'

As students walked by the athletics facility, there were police officers outside and signs on doors reading, "No spectators." Music blared over the speakers inside and some pre-planned fan announcements, including one promoting social media sharing — "Tell the world you're here" — went on with no fans to hear them.

"It was definitely a weird experience," WPI forward Jake Wisniewski said. "Everything, all the emotions that are going on the court, everyone was able to hear it, which was weird. Usually, the crowd can kind of mask a lot of things that are being said on the court.'

An NCAA COVID-19 advisory

BALTIMORE (AP) - In what was panel said Friday, it is "not recommending cancellation or public spacing of athletic and related events scheduled to occur in public spaces across the United States." Johns Hopkins senior scholar Amesh Adalja is on the panel.

Johns Hopkins University said it was "prudent to hold this tournament without spectators" after Maryland's recently confirmed COVID-19 cases and CDC guidelines for large gatherings. Maryland announced there were three cases of the virus.

A student at Yeshiva, an Orthodox Jewish university in the Washington Heights neighborhood of New York City, tested positive for the virus.

The game was delayed by more than an hour after a Yeshiva rabbi tested positive and the school needed to provide documentation to ensure it was safe to play. WPI waited at its hotel while that was completed.

Once things got under way, the national anthem and starting lineups went on as normal with players giving each other fist pounds instead of handshakes. WPI was without three players who decided not to play because of fears about the virus.

"Once we got the OK from Johns Hopkins University and the NCAA that they felt comfortable, we had most of our team and student-athletes and parents comfortable about playing. We didn't have everybody, though," WPI coach Chris Bartley said. "We left it up to the individual Yeshiva posted its 28th consecutive victory and first in the NCAA Tournament in program history.

"At the end of the day, we said we're just going to play our game and play basketball and run our stuff and play defense," said sopho-

Host Johns Hopkins was set to face Penn State Harrisburg on Friing Yeshiva in the second round tonight. The gym was heavily disinfected Thursday night and then again between games Friday.

"We did that specific to make sure that there were no questions that we were doing our due diligence, that everything was clean and ready to go," Johns Hopkins director of athletic communicamore Ryan Turell, who scored a tions Ernie Larossa said. "We're career-high 41 points in the empty just doing our due diligence to make sure that everybody has a safe environment to compete in."

Johns Hopkins offered refunds to fans who bought tickets. Larossa said more than 400 tickets had been sold for the two sessions Friday.

Sports events in Italy and Japan have been held without fans in recent weeks, and Meydan Racecourse in Dubai announced it would hold its Super Saturday horse racing this weekend at an empty track. Santa Clara County in California on Thursday recommended the cancellation of large gatherings, including San Jose Sharks hockey games, but the NHL went ahead with the team's game against Minnesota on Thursday night and the team said weekend games would go on as scheduled.

This game is the second in Baltimore to be held without fans, albeit under different circumstances. A 2015 Major League Baseball game between the Orioles and Chicago White Sox went on at an empty Camden Yards because of civil unrest in the city after the death of Freddie Gray.

Yeshiva's team had its hotel reservation in suburban Baltimore canceled over coronavirus fears, forcing the team to book rooms at a different place. A PR firm representing the hotel said in a statement sent to The Associated Press "the management of the property followed the precautionary measures set by Yeshiva University, that has recently cancelled classes, as well as scheduled events, through Tuesday, March 10th" and did not discriminate against the team.

Blaney gets multiyear extension with Penske

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Ryan Blaney's future is secure with Team Penske and his present looks pretty good, too.

The NASCAR points leader is off to the best start of his career and was rewarded Friday when Team Penske announced it had agreed to a multiyear extension with the 26-year-old driver. He would have been a free agent at the end of the season.

"I'm really happy with where I'm at, I love the people I'm around, I love working with all the teams," Blaney said. "I feel like I owed so much to Roger (Penske) for what he's done for me. I just didn't really see myself, right now, anywhere else.'

WAPAKONETA — The players in blue and gold gave it a good run on Friday night.

Caleb Kinney scored 10 of his game-high 17 points in the fourth quarter, helping Parkway defeat Marion Local 41-31 and clinch the

The first semifinal will tip off at 6:15 p.m. and features No. 1 Columbus Grove against No. 2 Antwerp.

Marion Local (13-13) had its eightgame winning streak come to a halt. The program was making a fourth straight district finals appearance - this one was more improbable than the previous three. The Flyers sat 5-12 after a Feb. 7 loss to New Bremen. They went nearly a whole month without getting beat again.

program's first-ever boys basketball district title.

"All of the grind, all of the summer work leading up to this, it all paid off tonight," Kinney said.

The Panthers (18-7) had entered the week 0-for-4 in the district semifinal round, but they beat Minster 48-43 on Tuesday and then outslugged Marion Local for a second time this season. Parkway won the Jan. 10 contest at Marion Local 44-42. Friday's game featured six ties and eight lead changes before the Panthers finished it off with a 16-6 run.

"Their physicality is nothing like you can prepare for," Parkway coach Doug Hughes said. "I thought our JV and our freshman guys who have been practicing with us gave us a great look this week on Wednesday and Thursday trying to prepare us for the physicality. It's so important when you play Marion Local that the kids understand that you don't back down. It's going to be an extremely-physical contest. You've got to keep them off the boards. If you let them get going on the offensive glass or you back down, it's going to be awfully difficult to win."

Parkway will head to Bowling Green's Stroh Center on Tuesday to face Tiffin Calvert, a 53-36 winner over Arlington on Friday. The regional semifinal tips off at 8 p.m.

Coach Kurt Goettemoeller made his team a promise on Valentine's Day: get to the district final and he'd wear a pink bow tie.

"They wanted me to wear it on Valentine's Day and I said, 'You've got to earn that," " Goettemoeller recalled. "I told them they had to get us to a district final. I said 'If you get us to a district final, then I'll wear a bow tie.' It looked pretty improbable back then when we were sitting 5-12. ... What a heckuva run our guys had. I'm super proud of them. Obviously we're disappointed because we had a chance to get out of here. But it's so tough to get out of this district, and you just have to give all the credit in the world to Parkway. Their kids stepped up and made plays. They're just big and strong and they wore on us. Doug does a heckuva job. We're definitely disappointed that we lost. But we'll definitely be rooting for those guys

Our First Laws

Founded by Betty Debnam

Mini Fact:

Gouverneur Morris, who lived from 1752-1816, is credited with writing the Preamble to the Constitution.

The Articles of Confederation were our new country's first laws. A confederation is a group united together for a purpose. The Articles of Confederation joined together our original 13 states.

The Articles held our country together during the fight for independence from Britain. When the American Revolution was over and the enemy threat was gone, the states became interested only in themselves.

There were many problems because there was no strong central government.

Money: The government had no control over paper money. Each state could print its own.

Taxes: The government did not have the power to collect taxes. Gen. George Washington was well aware of this problem. During the Revolutionary War, many of his troops were ragged and hungry. Some troops paid for their own gunpowder.

Trade: The government had no powers over trade or commerce. Dealing with other countries was hard because Congress could not speak for all states. States even set tariffs, or taxes, on items coming in from other states.

Other countries had no respect for us: Our government was so weak that England kept some of the forts it agreed to give up after the Revolutionary War.

Mount Vernon meeting, 1785

After the Revolution, the government of the 13 states was not strong enough to straighten out differences among the states. Leaders met at George Washington's home to settle differences between Maryland and Virginia. The five delegates settled the differences, and then decided to hold a meeting once a year and invite all 13 states.

Meeting at Annapolis, 1786

Five states sent a total of 12 delegates. They took a strong step. They sent word to the Congress and other states that another meeting should be held the next year to rewrite the Articles of Confederation. The meeting in 1787 did more than that. It wrote the Constitution.

Try 'n' Find

Words that remind us of our first laws are hidden in this puzzle. Some words are hidden backward, and some letters are used twice. See if you can find:

We the People of the United States, in Order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

The Preamble

CELEBRATING

Most people agree that the first three words — "We the People" — are the most important in the Constitution. They clearly say that the American people are in charge of their government. This is known as "popular sovereignty." The people hold the power.

Who are 'We the People'?

In 1787, when the Constitution was written, there were about 3,894,000 people in the United States. Today there are about 330,177,000. We the people have grown!

In 2005, Betty Debnam, creator of The Mini Page, worked closely with the National Archives in Washington, D.C., to create a nine-part series of issues about our U.S. Constitution. This is the second issue in the series, which will continue once a month until Election Day 2020.

Eco Note

Why is it important to protect our planet? The average person goes through two trees' worth of paper products a year. Across the globe, around 1 million new plastic bags are used every minute. Even if you live in the center of a city, you cannot survive without nature. People once saw nature as something to be tamed and dominated. Now we know it's vital to look after the environment. The future of the planet is in our hands and depends on choices we make today.
